Introduction to the Teaching Quality Award

About ABLs

The Accreditation Body for Language Services is recognised by the UK Government for the accreditation of high-quality English language teaching institutions in the UK.

ABLS has operated since 1993 establishing a reputation for rigorous inspections and assessment. A supportive approach to schools that aim to continuously improve the quality of their teaching provision is offered and is integral to our mission.

The inspectorate operates an annual review process to ensure ABLs standards are regularly updated. Inspectors are well-qualified and have extensive experience of the international education sector.

About the Award

The ABLs Teaching Quality Award is awarded to schools who demonstrate a high standard of quality in academic management, systems and delivery of their English language provision. The Award is available to all privately owned schools teaching English in mainland Europe.

As part of the initial process schools wishing to apply for the Award complete a self assessment followed by a video-conference with the Chief Inspector.

There is then an assessment visit by inspectors to speak to staff, observe teaching and review evidence of quality in the school.

Successful schools will be permitted to display the ABLs Teaching Quality Award logo in their publicity and will be promoted via ABLs digital marketing and events.

Helping Schools Improve and Develop

ABLS takes a constructive approach to helping schools improve the quality of their teaching.

Schools are provided with a report that shows the areas in which our quality requirements are being met and points of excellence are identified. The report also explains where schools can improve their courses to meet our criteria and time and support is given in order to make that improvement.

ABLS helps schools to reflect on the quality of their provision to ensure that students have the best possible language education.

3. Employment processes support a positive academic environment
4. Courses are accurately described in all school marketing

Academic Management Criteria

5. Academic management is provided by suitably qualified staff (reference ABLs Inspection Handbook)
6. A pre-course testing system is in place and each individual student's requirements are recorded
7. An accurate and reliable student placement system is applied
8. Records of course and test achievements are recorded and reviewed
9. A clear and practical syllabus is in place
10. Effective induction procedures are in place
11. Good channels of communication for all academic staff are in place
12. There is good opportunity for professional development and appraisal

Classroom Management and Resources Criteria

13. Teaching is of a good standard
14. Planning for lessons and courses is of a good standard
15. There is good variety in lessons with support for different learning styles and learning needs
16. There is appropriate use of a range of teaching equipment and materials

Statement of Compliance

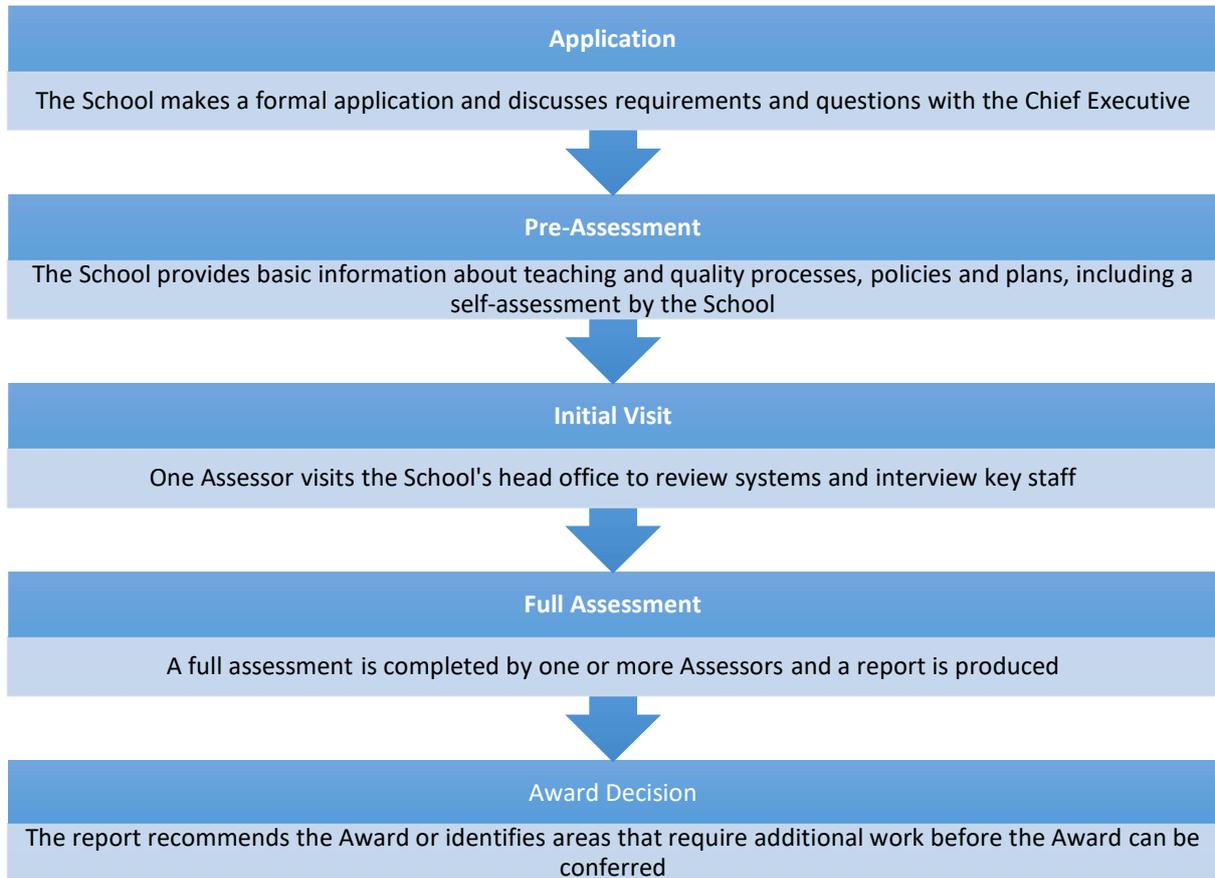

All schools complete a statement of compliance that includes statutory requirements for the countries in which they operate.

Self-Assessment

Schools submit a short self-assessment that includes:

- a brief history of the organisation and its recent activity
- a staff profile, a summary of recruitment processes and requirements
- a summary of courses and curricula
- a brief description of how quality is managed at each stage of the student cycle
- any policies relating to quality management

The Assessment Process

Following a successful Full Assessment:

- details of the School are listed on the ABLs website together with a publishable statement
- the ABLs Teaching Quality Award logo, to be used on the school's promotional material, is released
- the School will be listed in all Teaching Quality Award promotional materials produced by ABLs

The Award is conferred for two years. After this period, a further Full Assessment is required:

- If the standard of teaching has not been maintained, the School can either withdraw from the scheme or agree to a second follow-up assessment, having been given sufficient time to implement improvements
- If the standards have been maintained, the ABLs Teaching Quality Award will be confirmed and will be valid for a further period of two years
